CAVE FOR HALEAKALA

No Accommodation for Tourists There.

Tourists Sit Out a Night in a Wet Shed.

Good Baseball With Chinamen in Nine—Pineapples for Maui. Maui's Drouth Broken.

MAUI, Aug. 1.—There's a scheme afoot originated by W. O. Aiken of Paia of tunnelling out a cave on the summit of Haleakala to act as a shelter for tourists who wish to spend a night at the top for the purpose of viewing the crater at sunrise. "Cragielea," the little stone summit house, is roofless and in ruins, and "Flea" cave is objectionable because walking three-fourths of a mile up a sandy slope at an altitude of 10,000 feet is most difficult and Maui ponies, which have spent the night amid rocks and sand without food shivering with cold in a temperature of twenty or thirty degrees above zero, are apt to treat the "tenderfoot" visitor rather discourteously, often exhibiting a tendency to buck, or balk or rush down the mountain instead of up.

Two weeks or more ago a party of twelve persons spent a most uncomfortable night at the top. "Cragielea" being out of the question, they took refuge in a shelter near by which had been erected for the use of horses. A heavy and continuous rain set in and the iron roof leaked so badly that each member of the party spent the night in a sitting position soaked to the skin. However every one said they had a good time for there was much laughing and joking, singing and story-telling.

In this party were two prominent Chicago people who, in telling of their trip, after describing the grandeur and beauty of the crater scenery, will probably mention some of the discomforts of the occasion.

In these progressive times when so much is said of attracting tourists to Hawaii, it seems as though some shelter better than a cave (which of course is most acceptable on a stormy night) should be constructed either at county or Territorial expense for the use of travellers who are desirous of seeing the greatest extinct volcano in the world.

GOOD BASEBALL.

On the afternoon of July 25th, the best baseball game of the season was played between the Males of Kahului and the Wallukas at Wells' Park. The advantage in the contest kept changing—first one side led in the scoring and then the other. "It was any one's game," till the final innings which decided the struggle in favor of Walluku—six runs to five. For the Wallukas L. R. Crook played at first base in place of W. H. Cornwell, Jr., who was sick with dengue. A full-blooded Chinese acted as their new short stop most satisfactorily. Who says that Western civilization is difficult for the Oriental? The Walluku club now numbers two Chinese among its expert baseballists. Tomorrow's game will be between the Morning Stars and the Lahinas.

PINEAPPLES FROM MAUI.

By today's Nebraska to San Francisco via Honolulu Mr. D. D. Baldwin will ship 100 crates of fine pineapples. This is the first venture of the kind from Maui and may if successful mean much to the industries of the island.

STRAY NOTES.

The Harvest Home celebration takes place at Puunene Mill tonight.

Thursday a general rain broke up the summer's drought on Maui. One to two inches of moisture fell according to location. In the mountains the rainfall was greater, for streams were running and pools were filled with water which rarely happens except in the winter season.

The luau and dance given by the ladies of the Nawaleha Court, K. of P., at Walluku, July 25th, were both successful events.

Several Maui plantations will pay good dividends this year. The last has been an exceptional fine season for growing cane.

Arrangements are nearly completed for the incorporation at Walluku of the "Maui Liquor and Wine Association." This company will buy the wholesale and retail stores of Lovejoy & Co. and have offered to purchase the Macfarlane stores. W. G. Scott and D. L. Meyers are the promoters of the enterprise.

Eugene S. Capellas of Hawaii, who was married at Walluku, July 15th, to Miss Eliza dos Reis of Nahlku, will reside at Hakalau, Hawaii, where he and his wife will be teachers in the government school.

Government Surveyor S. M. Kanakani is at Wallua in the Koolau region straightening out some of the boundaries of the ricelands there. He will later run some lines on the government lands at Keanae.

Yesterday, July 31st, Circuit Judge J. W. Kailua of Walluku took the steamer for Honolulu. He was summoned as a witness in the Magoon disbarment case.

The polo game at Paia last Saturday afternoon, July 25th, resulted in a score of two goals to one against the "Reds" in favor of the "Yellows."

The August literary of the Makawao society will take place at the home of F. W. Hardy of Makawao, Monday evening, the 10th.

Miss Uecke of Hilo has been the guest of Mrs. C. W. Dickey of Olinda House for a week or more.

Yesterday afternoon, July 31, the steamer Nebraskan arrived in Kahului from Honolulu bringing 500 tons of merchandise. She will probably steam back to Honolulu today taking only 500 bags of sugar.

All the sugar of the Central Maui plantations is being reserved for the steamer Alaskan which is expected at Kahului on the 23d. She will take an unusually large cargo of sugar direct to New York.

Miss Ray Kribs, who teaches deaf children to speak at Sheboygan, Wisconsin, has been the guest of Mrs. W. O. Aiken of Makawao during the week. Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Carter of Honolulu arrived on Maui yesterday and will occupy a cottage at Haleakala Ranch for a month or so.

Things Looking Better.

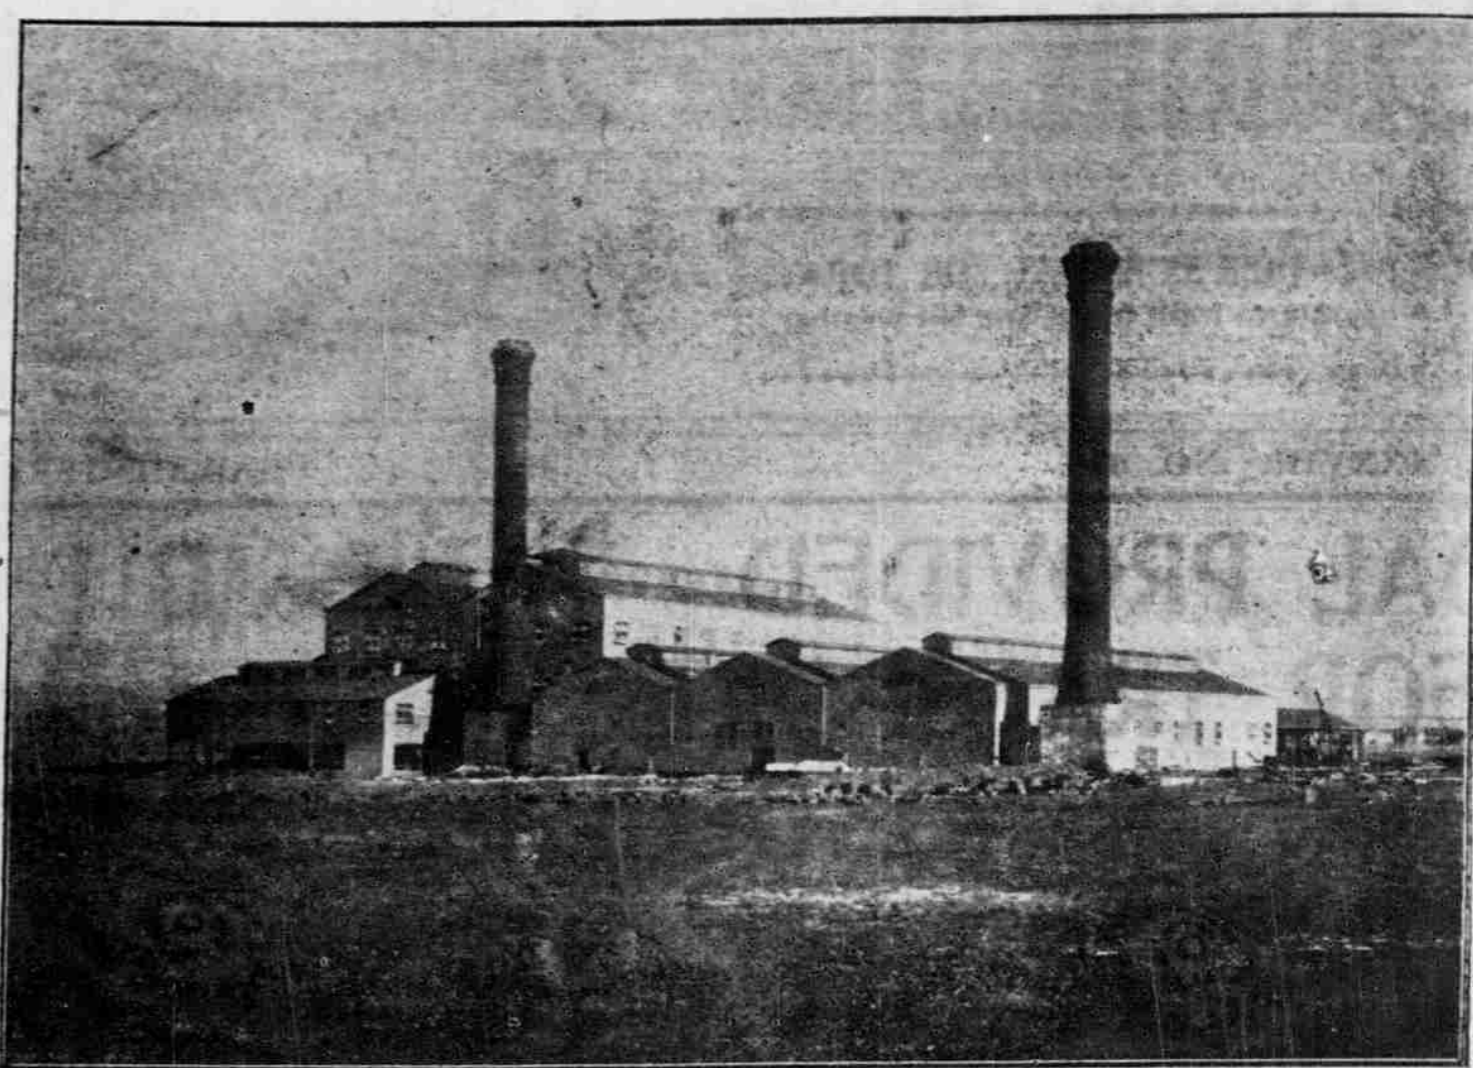

A healthy index of changing and improving conditions on Maui is noted in the eagerness with which stock in local industries and enterprises is snapped up by local capital. Several local stock companies of this class have been organized on Maui during the last two or three years, and in each case the stock has been largely oversubscribed. The present movement of Maui men to organize a stock company to handle the wholesale liquor trade is a striking case in point, and emphasizes the fact that a firm, united and prosperous future is before us. Two meanings are to be drawn from this, first that the people of Maui recognize the fact that we have a bright future before us, and secondly that the people of Maui propose to reap the benefits of local trade, rather than allow foreign houses and capital to conduct our business. Other companies are to be organized in the future for industrial and business purposes and there is no doubt that all such legitimate enterprises will find plenty of ready backers.—Maui News.

Not Enough Houses.

Wanted—More residence buildings in Walluku. There is no more pressing need in Walluku just now than that of residences for the new people who desire to come here and make their homes with us. Recently several families, who would be an ornament to any town, have sought vainly to find homes here and have been compelled to go elsewhere, simply because there are no residences to let, and this has been true for several years past. Walluku has reached a stage where it is bound to grow for some years yet, if homes can be had or building lots obtained. There are many lots available, if their owners chose to put them on the market, and it would pay the Walluku Plantation big dividends in the increased value of its town property, if it would build a dozen commodious houses to rent on its idle town lands, and private owners should follow the same example. Now is the time for the citizens of Walluku to take hold of the matter and organize a citizens' committee to push the matter.—Maui News.

Kahoolawe for Sisal.

The proposed hunting and fishing excursion of a party of young men from Honolulu to Kahoolawe seems to have a deeper meaning than appears on the surface. One who would have suggested a year ago that Kahoolawe might one day be utilized for agricultural purposes would have made himself a laughing stock, yet that is precisely what is in contemplation. It is known that sisal requires but little moisture and if Kahoolawe be found available for the purpose there is no doubt but that one day it will become one huge sisal farm.—Maui News.

PUUNENE MILL.

GOOD SHARK FISHING OUTSIDE THE REEF.

There was a shark-fishing expedition to the mouth of the harbor yesterday, and when the party returned they were convinced of the fact that it would be a dangerous matter to do any great amount of swimming in that locality. The party was made up of Deputy Sheriff Chillingworth, Prince Kuhio, Carlos Long, Palmer Wood, and Dan Renear. One of Young's launches was used. A horse was the bait. The animal was a very old one, and as it was badly crippled it was shot yesterday, tied to the stern of the launch and towed out to the mouth of the harbor. Off Kalihi the animal was cut up, and in a short time five sharks put in an appearance and began to fight for a share of the carcass. When the sharks came, the horse was drawn slowly towards the boat so that the men could get a shot. One of the sharks was hit and sank before it could be secured. Finally Chillingworth managed to harpoon a large fellow and they started to tow him out to sea away from the reef. When they were about to secure him one of the men fired and the bullet cutting the harpoon in two, the shark was lost. In a short time another was harpooned and after a fight was brought alongside the launch and killed. The selachian measured over thirteen feet. It was brought in the harbor and last night was put on one of Young Brothers' floats. The men who composed the party had an exciting afternoon, and consider that shark-fishing is one of the liveliest sports that may be indulged in these islands.

Belows—"Does your daughter play on the piano?" Old man (in tones of deep disgust)—"No, sir. She works on it, pound rakes it, scrapes it, jumps on it, and rolls over on it; but she plays about it, sir."—Tit-Bits.
